

I am opposed to removal of hazardous materials labeling from trains and motor carriers. It is important for everyone in the area (not just emergency personnel) to immediately be aware that there is a dangerous situation and take appropriate action to protect themselves. To prevent opportunistic terrorist use of this information, better security, better immigration screening, and better identification of and neutralization of internal terrorist threats would be a good start. It would also help to stop catering to domestic and foreign business interests by weakening regulations such as those governing inspection of ship cargos.
